

Colleen's Contemplations – May 2010

Ah spring. It's a wonderful season. Everyone's spirits are lighter and we're all outdoors more. It's the time of year when inevitably this girl's thoughts turn to underwear. It's been exactly two years since my last ode to underwear, and I know you've all been wondering about the underwear situation. Last ode my focus was on how a simple item like pretty underwear can make us feel good about ourselves. This year I want to talk about hand-me-downs. I love hand-me-downs. They can save a bunch of money, and I for one like a nice worn in sweatshirt or jeans. BUT underwear? Whose hand-me-down underwear would you wear? Ok, maybe socks, after all I do steal socks from my hubby once in a while. BUT underwear? No, borrowing underwear is just not something I'm ok with.

So, lest I need to be writing about underwear on a more regular basis, could everyone just pick up a couple extra pairs of underwear when they are out shopping? Don't worry about sizes, or colors, or styles. Our WNC friends come in all shapes and sizes as well, so no underwear will go to waste. Wouldn't it be nice for everyone to get new underwear this month, it's like spring cleaning on a personal level.

That's it, that's all I'm going to say about underwear. For now. Thanks for listening.
